Ms. Francesca Albanese is the UN Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian Territory occupied since 1967. She is also an affiliate Scholar at the Institute for the Study of International Migration at Georgetown University, and a Senior Advisor on Migration and Forced Displacement for the think tank Arab Renaissance for Democracy and Development (ARDD), where she co-founded the Global Network on the Question of Palestine (GNQP), a coalition of renowned professional and scholars engaged in/on Israel/Palestine. She has published widely on the legal situation in Israel/Palestine; her latest book, Palestinian Refugees in International Law (Oxford University Press, 2020), offers a comprehensive legal analysis of the situation of Palestinian refugees from its origins to modern-day reality. She regularly teaches and lectures on International Law and Forced Displacement in European and Arab universities, and speaks frequently at conferences and public events on the legal situation of Palestine. She worked for a decade as a human rights expert for the United Nations, including the Office of the High Commissioner for Human Rights and the Relief and Work Agency for Palestine Refugees. In these capacities, she advised the UN, governments, and civil society across the Middle East, North Africa, and the Asia Pacific, on the enforcement of human rights norms, especially for vulnerable groups including refugees and migrants. She holds a Law Degree (with honors) from the University of Pisa and an LLM in Human Rights from the University of London, SOAS. She is currently completing her PhD in International Refugee Law at Amsterdam University Law Faculty.

Prof. Tasniem Anwar is assistant professor at the department of Criminology at the Vrije Universiteit Amsterdam. Her scientific interests are driven by a curiosity to understand how counter-terrorism measures operate at the intersection of international law and international security. In her PhD research, she studied terrorism financing court cases, and critically examined how law and security co-produce terrorism expertise and knowledge. She is co-convenor of the webinar series 'Decolonising Europe' and the Doing IPS seminar series in the Netherlands.

Dr. Federica Bicchi is Associate Professor of International Relations and Director of the European Foreign Policy Unit of the London School of Economics and Political Science (LSE). She is also member of the academic board of EUMENIA. Her current research focuses on contemporary trends in European diplomacy, especially in relation to the digitalization of diplomacy and developments in European foreign policy cooperation. Recent publications include articles in Review of International Studies, Cooperation and Conflict, Global Networks, Journal of Common Market Studies, The Hague Journal of Diplomacy, Geopolitics, Journal of European Public Policy, Democratization and Geopolitics. She has published European Foreign Policy Making towards the Mediterranean (Palgrave, 2007) and edited inter alia Europe and the Occupation of Palestinian Territories since 1967 (Routledge), European Diplomatic Practices (2018, with Niklas Bremberg) and The Struggle for Influence in the Middle East (2015, with Benoit Challand and Steven Heydeman).

Dr. Dimitris Bouris is an Assistant Professor (Senior Lecturer) at the Department of Political Science at the University of Amsterdam, an Associate Editor of the academic journal European Security, a Visiting Professor at the College of Europe (Natolin). He is the leader and coordinator of the EU-Middle East Jean Monnet Network EUMENIA. Dr Bouris is the author of The European Union and Occupied Palestinian Territories: State-building without a State (Routledge, 2014), the co-editor (with Tobias Schumacher) of the Revised European Neighbourhood Policy: Continuity and Change in EU Foreign Policy (Palgrave Macmillan, 2017) and the co-editor (with Daniela Huber and Michelle Pace) of the Routledge Handbook of EU-Middle East Relations (Routledge, 2022). He has also edited special issues and published a number of scholarly articles in leading peer-reviewed academic journals such as European Security, the Hague Journal on the rule of law, Mediterranean Politics, Global Affairs, International Spectator, the British Journal of Politics and International Relations, International Political Sociology and Geopolitics.

Prof. Münevver Cebeci is a full Professor at the Institute of European Studies, Marmara University, Istanbul. She was also a visiting professor (2017-2019) and senior researcher (2016-2017) at the College of Europe – Natolin. She is also member of the academic board of EUMENIA. Her teaching and research focus on European foreign policy (the Euro-Mediterranean Partnership/UfM and European Neighbourhood Policy) and security studies.

Dr. Anne de Jong is associate professor in the anthropology of conflict with a regional expertise on the Middle East (Palestine, Lebanon, Syria and Bahrain). Prioritising subaltern everyday perspectives, her research interests centre on violence/nonviolence, radical activism and social movements, human rights violations and resistance, anti-racism and anti-colonial struggles. For her PhD (2011, SOAS) she conducted a 19-month fieldwork research in the Occupied Palestinian Territories including East-Jerusalem and Gaza. Emphasising anti-racism and social justice struggles, her current work focuses on nonviolent resistance in armed conflict (Palestine), the transition between armed and unarmed struggle (Nepal) and anti-racism and anticolonial activism (South Africa and the Netherlands). Born from the necessity of doing “fieldwork under fire”, research ethics and innovative methodology have grown central to her work and are also reflected in her teachings.

Dr. Tamirace Fakhoury is an Associate Professor of Political Science and Global Refugee and Migration Studies at the University of Aalborg in Copenhagen. She is also the scientific adviser to the Kuwait Chair at Sciences Po in Paris and a member of the academic board of EUMENIA. Her core research and publication areas are: the theory and practice of power sharing in divided societies, migration dynamics and governance, Arab states’ coping mechanisms with forced migration, and the role of immigrant communities and diasporas in democratization, and conflict transformation. She is member of the core coordination team of the Global Migration Policy Associates in Geneva.

Mr. Giovanni Fassina is a Programme director of the the European Legal Support Center (ELSC), the first and only human rights organisation providing free legal assistance to associations, human rights NGOs, academics and students advocating for Palestinian rights in mainland Europe and the United Kingdom. Giovanni oversees the legal team and the strategic litigation work of the ELSC. Previously, he worked as trainee lawyer at a Human Rights law firm in Venice (Italy).

Dr. Ioannis Galariotis is a research fellow at the Political Science and International Relations Department of the University of Peloponnese. From September 2017 to December 2017, he was visiting Lecturer at the Institute of European, Russian and Eurasian Studies at Carleton University (Ottawa, Canada). Previously, he was Max Weber Fellow (2015-2017) at the Department of Political and Social Sciences, European University Institute where he was affiliated at the thematic research group “Europe in the World: Foreign Relations, International Security, World Politics”. His research focuses on the employment of diverse computational social science approaches (automated content analysis techniques and sentiment analysis) to examine the role of the EU as a global and regional security actor. Prior to joining the EUI, he was a post-doctoral research fellow at the Athens University of Economics and Business (2013-2015) in the research project “The EU Performance at the United Nations General Assembly”. His broader research agenda focuses on European integration, international relations, foreign policy analysis and political methodology.

Mr. Marc Gerritsen is Director of the North Africa and Middle East Department at the Ministry of Foreign Affairs in The Hague. He is a career diplomat with extensive experience abroad (Ramallah, Rome and Tokyo among others). At headquarters, he served as director of Policy Planning and as deputy director of the organization of the Nuclear Security Summit 2014 in The Hague. Also, he worked in the Prime Minister’s Office in The Hague as an advisor on international and EU affairs and as a secretary to the Council of Ministers. Marc Gerritsen holds an MA in History from the University of Groningen and also studied in Chicago, Paris and Cairo. Mr. Gerritsen is married with three children.

Dr. Ioannis N. Grigoriadis is Associate Professor and Jean Monnet Chair of European Studies at the Department of Political Science and Public Administration, Bilkent University.
